WHAT DOES THE TRAINING INCLUDE?

Feeding and eating difficulties are very common in children and adolescents on the autism spectrum, with estimates ranging from 46-89%. This online workshop will summarise the literature regarding fussy eating and eating disorders in young people on the autism spectrum, overview assessment of these issues, and review the evidence – based interventions. Interventions for Avoidant/Restrictive Food Intake Disorder or, ARFID, in older children and adolescents will form the major focus.

Treatment focuses on a combination of techniques aimed at addressing both weight gain/normalization of eating and additional symptoms including fear, disgust, and varying forms of functionally-related avoidance behavior. Case-studies and interactive activities will be used to demonstrate key interventions.

Please note:

We encourage early registration as some workshops reach capacity quickly. Additional workshops may be scheduled if there is sufficient interest.
